Many human experiences like hearing voices have, in our culture, been mystified and made taboo and yet are remarkably common. Making experiences harder to talk about makes experiences harder to live with and harder to learn how we might live with them. This leads to more of us struggling including individuals and families supporting their loved ones. Hearing Voices Café is rooted in the simple belief that we can come together to talk about difficult human experiences in ordinary language and in ordinary places so we do. Join us for a different kind of conversation about what it means to be human in this world.
